liers' Superstitions: Make Him Believe in It Yet.

San Francisco Examiner.

The fender is a great round of wood, from day to day, and the fender's superstitions are not yet dead.
 was found embedded in the end of a log that had been cut out of
 to have new mooring holes
 This fender is an immense one, and has a duty as low as some vessel, just what sort of a one has originally been, I will not say, but I am inclined to think that the old fender has been shifted that the oldest wharfling could not have been of the origin of the as scores of others are, after it had adomed as a mast, and after years had been between all the wharves at the butt end remains to tell that it is a reported case of the and was made in the center of the
 to the rotten wood of which he was with the water, and the wanted to secure the 'luck-of the water, and the
 it fortune for him. The custom taking a coin under the mast of a and as the ship was to be it was intended to propitiate the
 the water, and was universal among The custom of putting a coin to being as extensive, and nine vessels out of the day were to be silver in the center of the step of the if search be made. The quarter of the fender was still white being blackened by the action of the as fresh as the day it came mint.

trades itself when Chicago brides are mentioned.

SENATOR HOAR says that the election of Senators by the people would be a new temptation to fraud. As there is so much bribery in the present system, perhaps Mr. Hoar would just leave the choosing of Senators to the President.

SECRETARY CARLISLE is doing what he can for his fellow-Kentuckians, but no fault should be found with him for this. Unquestionably experts are very necessary in a place where there is so much bad whisky as there is in Washington.

From a corporation point of view the less said about the Ann Arbor decision the better. But strange to say they are trying to establish a bureau of education to spread the news among the people and teach them what it all means.

BUTLER'S unfriendliness to the Noonan campaign gave him a chance to work the Noonan administration for four years and his friendliness to the Bannerman campaign gives him a chance to work Walbridge for another four years.

EVEN in Massachusetts the cigars smoked by committees of the Legislature are paid for by the State. If the Massachusetts voter is not intellectual enough to put a stop to legislative abuses, what can be expected of the voter in other States?

SO LONG as the ladies of Kansas vote for their husbands, fathers, brothers and lovers there can be no considerable revolution over there, and the man with beautiful whiskers will have no more chance in a race for an office than one of his less fortunate fellow-citizens.

GEN. BRAGG refused the Austrian mission because he was not rich enough to maintain American dignity in Vienna. What does the "American dignity" amount to that stoops to the follies of an antiquated foreign court? Is an American Minister to be judged by the amount of money he has acquired?

MUSICIAN HUB SMITH, who accompanies the Behring Sea Commissioners with his banjo, will doubtless have the tact to play only foreign airs before the arbitrators. It will be time enough to play the "Star Spangled Banner" and "Yankee Doodle" when the contest has been decided in our favor.

JUSTICE BARRETT of the New York Supreme Court surprised the plutocrats yesterday by quoting the old maxim that he who seeks equity must have clean hands. He placed a conspiracy of manufacturers on exactly the same ground as a conspiracy of workmen, which, of course, is a very unusual and dangerous doctrine to the plutocrats.

THOSE who object to the appointment of Mr. Stevenson's cousin as Minister to Belgium must bear in mind that he is not merely the Vice-President's cousin—he is Mr. Stevenson's law partner. The law-partner precedent is now too firmly established to be set aside, and the people only ask that the law partner shall be capable and honest.

THE Emperor of Germany has sent Von Mumm, lately the Secretary of the German Legation at Washington, to Rome, and in recognition of his services has made him a Knight of the Order of St. John. The recipient of these honors is highly esteemed by all who know him in this country and his advancement is gratifying to his American friends.

THE danger of permitting any part of the licensing power to remain with the Collector of the Revenue was fully demonstrated in Tuesday's election. The fact that Carl Ziegenhein's power in the matter of dramshop licenses was broken by the Legislature only strengthened his "pull" on voting elements not connected with and opposed to wild cat saloons through his control of other licenses.

A TOUCH of saturnine humor is given to the wind-up of the Butler-Fuller trick to defeat the Democratic ticket through Butler's posing as the friend of Bannerman by the Republican recognition of Ed Butler as the Democratic leader and his announcement of his retirement from politics. Butler will not be fittingly retired from politics until he is retired from Democratic councils and conventions by the business end of a copper-toed Democratic boot.

THE defeat of Sam Allerton, the candidate of the pharisee franchise-grabbing class in Chicago, is a victory for genuine Democracy. Carter Harrison, with all the faults imputed to him by his enemies, is a better man than Allerton and in sympathy with the people rather than the plutocrats. He is also an educated and cultured gentleman who will be as courtly as the courtliest in the presence of the visitors this World's Fair year. He can compose his own speeches in good English, deliver them with grace, and act in all respects like a worthy representative of a Democratic community. In all of which respects he is in marked contrast to his late millionaire opponent.

THE absurd condition into which public affairs have fallen is well illustrated by the rumors of disagreements between the President and Cabinet officers concerning small appointments. It is said that several of the secretaries have put men in important places and that their action has been undone by a veto endorsement signed "G. C." The stories are probably not true, but they indicate the low estate of public opinion concerning the requirements of the presidency and cabinet. That the two should fall out over the consulate or a treasury clerkship would be amazing if such things had not come to be taken as a matter of course. And so we cannot say that Mrs. Carlisle's reported declaration that "John would never have left the Senate" had been known what was coming is incredible. On the contrary, it is the most natural thing in the world, and the more possibility that such things can be soberly repeated and published is an emphatic demonstration of the need of a thorough overhauling of current ideas on the subject of national politics.

HOIST BY ITS OWN PETARD.

The Old Pretender did not have a word to say editorially against Joseph Brown, the only successful Democratic candidate and the opponent of "the Globe-Democrat's nominee" on the Republican ticket, until the day of the election, when it was impossible for Mr. Brown to make reply. Then in the desperate hope of saving its bacon it made a cowardly attempt to arouse religious prejudice against Auditor Brown by printing the following paragraph:

Irish Catholics who think of voting for Joseph Brown for Auditor have probably forgotten how bitterly he assailed them and their church in the municipal campaign of 1878.

To-day when the Old Pretender realizes that it is the butt of the town as a political hoodoo it attempts to explain the fact that its "nominee" was the only Republican candidate defeated as follows:

Mr. Fishback was not fairly defeated for the office of City Auditor. He was A. P. A. out of it.

As a confessed example of sneaking and blundering malignancy defeating its own ends this has never been approached.

A "PUSH" CONSPIRACY.

The information that Ed Butler wears a satisfied smile over the result of Tuesday's election is in keeping with the situation. No one has more reason for satisfaction than Butler, because no one contributed more to the defeat of Bannerman and other Democratic candidates whom he could not expect to use as he has used Walbridge.

It is well known that the support of Butler is fatal to a local candidate or ticket. The chief element in Noonan's success four years ago was the fact that he was credited with smashing the Butler combination in the Democratic convention, and the popular belief that Butler was against him. No one knows better than Butler how potent for defeat is his advocacy of a candidate, yet he made himself most conspicuous as the friend and supporter of Bannerman and thus furnished at the same time the best campaign material the Republicans could have had and the strongest proof of a conspiracy between Butler and the Republican "push" bosses to "do" Bannerman in the interest of their "combine." The motive which underlies this sinister plot to use Butler's avowed friendship for Bannerman as a means of electing Walbridge is found in the record of Walbridge's votes for "combine" jobs of which Butler and Comfort were the chief engineers.

The people of this city will get an excellent idea of the inside workings of local politics in the developments of the next four years. Unless all signs fail they will find that Ed Butler was not defeated in the election of Walbridge, a "push combine" working through Butler and Democratic officials for a "push combine" working through Comfort and Republican officials.

THE Tory party of England was once described by John Stuart Mill as the stupid party. The same epithet might well be applied to the plutocrats of this country who are now rubbing their hands with satisfaction over the victory they think they have gained over their men by formally conceding a principle which they have combated for years.

The decisions of Judges Ricks and Taft leave the railways, and in fact all corporations, in a more available position. Under stress of necessity the railroads have invoked a law which before they ridiculed, defied and spat upon. They surrender the whole ground maintained so stubbornly ever since the interstate law was enacted in order to gain a temporary advantage in a quarrel with their employees. The "right to run one's own business to suit oneself," which has been a pet hobby of railroad men, is given up in exchange for Government, or rather judicial, aid in a battle with a labor union. The doctrine as laid down by the two judges that railroads are subject to government control and regulation is broad, radical and comprehensive, and, strange to say, it gives immense satisfaction to the corporations. Of course they rely upon the pliability of judges and legislators, and hope that the law, interpreted strictly against the engineers, will not be interpreted at all against themselves. There is warrant for this expectation, but it is perilous ground to take. For once admit the principle of government interference in the details of management and operation, and public opinion is likely to force its application in all directions and a grand inquisition will follow into stock watering, jobbing, wrecking and all the other devices employed to pluck the public.

Altogether the plutocrats with the blindness, stupidity or madness which always comes with ill-got power have procured a decision which will forever put them at a disadvantage in their fight with the people. And they seem unable to see the bearing of the doctrine laid down for them as they are preparing to "educate the people" by keeping the discussion going for several months. Nothing could be better than such a discussion, for the end of it all could not but be an enlightened public opinion concerning dividends on watered stock and kindred topics. We shall know more about the actual cost of railroads and the paper valuations on which dividends are paid; and it is the right of the people to know these things and the duty of public officers to find out.

The prospect is that dividends will be sooner or later limited to a fair return upon actual cost. Wages will not be low that profits may be high, and rates will not be adjusted with reference to over-capitalization. The people will look into these things. The plutocrat has precipitated an active discussion, and yet he rubs his hands with glee.

EVERYWHERE as may eventually come into fashion from the fact that they are a bicycle necessity. Hiding a bike in the ordinary pantaloons is a bold undertaking. It is said of recent rider that "his right pantaloons leg, through some accident, caught in the wheel of the bicycle and before he could extricate himself there was ripping, swishing, tearing sound. That pantaloons leg was whirling through the air. The accident caused great consternation along the avenue, but one of his friends, with great presence of mind, enveloped him in a barrel and walked him to a place of refuge."

A WEAVER Cincinnati widow has poisoned the dogs that damaged her lawn, and the dog-owners "will take legal steps to prevent further poisoning." The idea that every dog should not have the freedom of every yard is doubtless quite astonishing to the average Cincinnati mind. The man or woman who drives dogs from their premises will soon be driving away chickens and shoots as well.

SOME of the Eastern bricklayers are striking against "jumping." A good many people who are expecting to build houses know of another thing they wish bricklayers would strike against. They wish that every bricklayer would strike against laying soft bricks in a wall.

The writers who say that the birth rate is decreasing should happen around at one of the big St. Louis shows at the time the youngsters are released for the day. The hair of old man Malthus would stand on end if he could behold that torrent.

The descendants of Columbus who will attend the World's Fair are dukes and honorables. It never entered Christopher's head that he was discovering a land in which titles of nobility would be discarded, and it was his ambition to found a noble house.

A KENTUCKY lady of 110 years has just been carried off by the measles. Strange to say her 90-year-old daughter did not contract the disease. It can no longer be held that measles is a disorder to which children alone are liable.

THERE is some surprise that a New York divine should have been made Bishop of Massachusetts. It has always been supposed that New York stood in need of Bishop from Boston.

THE break in the ice comes at Cincinnati is a sign of spring—more welcome than the note of the sweetest songster. He who looks forward to an iceless summer may well despair.

THE public is paying as high as $2.50 for tickets to see Mr. and Mrs. Corbett as they perform in the scale until she painted Massachusetts. It has always been supposed that New York stood in need of Bishop from Boston.

THE world thinks better of "Squire" Abington. Like Buck Fashaw, "he never shook his mother." He has left all his property to her.

THERE is no complaint of the backwardness of spring in Texas, where the mercury is getting in its work between 55 and 105.

FOR MR. OLNEY'S CONSIDERATION.

From the New York World. The attention of ATTY.-GEN. OLNEY was yesterday invited by the WORLD to the unlawful conspiracy called the Sugar Trust, which it is his imperative duty to prosecute, for its existence is in direct violation of Federal law.

To-day we lay before him the facts concerning the Rubber Trust, another conspiracy of capitalists to levy tribute upon the people in violation of express law and impudently to mock the law. Its assistant in collecting its gains.

This trust controls the manufacture of all articles made of rubber—articles of universal use and necessity. It gets its raw material free. It can manufacture its goods in competition with any foreign producer, and actually competes with foreign producers on its own ground. Yet it is "protected" by a duty of 30 percent, and while it sells to foreigners at rates fixed by competition, it adds the whole of the duty to the price when supplying American consumers.

The Rubber Trust is daily robbing the American people, who, for lack of competition in the business, have no redress or remedy when the laws against such combinations are not enforced.

The conspiracy by which this combination secures its monopoly and works its evil will is forbidden by the law and made criminal by express statute.

It is Mr. Olney's sworn duty to prosecute the conspirators. He cannot begin the work too soon.

Very Hard to Do, Though. From the Philadelphia Ledger. Immigrants have begun to arrive from Hamburg in border cities of the North and West by way of Halifax. They have evidently chosen that route to escape such quarantine as might be found necessary in Atlantic ports. Under the circumstances the Government will be justified in imposing upon them the same quarantine restrictions. The law is trying to force their way into the country in defiance of quarantine regulations, and will have no right to complain if they do not find at the back door as many conveniences provided during their detention as they might have had if they had come openly by the front door.

Badgering the President.

From the Buffalo Courier. A Washington dispatch says: Mr. Cleveland was worsted to-day by the necessity which compelled him to shake hands and talk with scores of office seekers. There is not another government in the world that would subject its chief magistrate to such useless indignity and discomfort. And all is no longer the inflexible creature she has been in regard to matrimony. Even when ardently in favor of it in general or in particular she may be discouraged by judicious friends or by an unfortunate personal experience. How often we hear in these days of engagements suddenly broken by her from some disclosure of the suitor's unworthiness, intemperance, dishonesty, licentiousness or the like. Sentimentalists may aver that she is heartless, unjust or Puritanic; that she should have adhered to him through thick and thin; that she could have reformed him by love, with other romantic nonsense. Woman is not now depicted in that way. She has learned that withdrawal before marriage is not so painful as separation after it; that mental suffering is not so bad as a domestic tragedy in five acts. And she is worldly-wise, acquainted with human nature as her lot in an earlier generation, were not. She is on the upward path of progress; she is the precursor in intelligence and practicality of the coming century of the great intellectual advance of women.

The fact is that many women at present are afraid of wedlock, incredible as this may seem to the masses. They are not so much and heard so much of conjugal discord as to perceive clearly that the chances of happiness, as it is called, are in any one source of complete satisfaction. They feel that why, should they try the experiment, their fortune should be an exception. They keep themselves, therefore, out of temptation and out of peril, as any woman may if she chooses. Their fear might be readily overcome if they should meet some man who would appeal to them strongly, and to whom the word would appeal in the same way. Prudence and reason would then be banished and the inevitable would follow. But connected with such passionate magnetizations occur in romances they are very rare in life, and so the way maids escape and remain maids to the end. Nor do they regret it, as is commonly supposed. As the years go on and as the dangers and horrors of matrimony are unfolded, their celibacy becomes more and more a source of complete satisfaction. They feel the pleasure which, it has been said, a spectator in a theater derives from a tragedy on the stage. They witness the trials and agonies of others and contrast them with the comfort and security of their own roof-tops.

she generally looks fresher, younger and is better preserved from most married women, and is fully as interesting as they. Her cellularity preserves her from many labors, cares, anxieties, duties, inseparable from domesticity, and she is a great gainer thereby, personally as well as mentally. Her manner is often better than those of wives because quieter, less pronounced. She lives in a more tranquil atmosphere, has fewer disturbances, and her nerves, the pest of American character, are not so sensitive, so excitable, and are under superior control. So far from being sour, harsh, garrulous, fault-finding, she is apt to be sweet, gentle, reserved, charitable. She has, in most cases, a large circle of warm, true friends of both sexes. Many of these wives are so irredeemably prejudiced in behalf of their own condition as to say when speaking of her: "She is a noble, superb woman. What a pity that she is not married." They do not tell her so—it would be an unpardonable impertinence—but she may overhear them occasionally. If she does she probably smiles, half-satirically, half-sadly, and with a world of meaning, as if she knew, as they could not know, what her nature needed.

It is a popular error that the traditional old maid has a rankling, remediless envy of most wives, particularly when they are young and have drawn a capital prize in the conjugal lottery. It may have been so once to a moderate extent, but it is very doubtful. Assuredly it is not so now. Her sister's matrimony has been so thoroughly disillusioned. Many old maids have refused more offers than most wives have had, and are still single. They are not so much deterred by the refusal. Instead of envying them, they feel that they themselves are enviable in having refused. They are not so much deterred by the refusal. Instead of envying them, they feel that they themselves are enviable in having refused. They are not so much deterred by the refusal. Instead of envying them, they feel that they themselves are enviable in having refused.

HOW A MAN FEELS UNDER FIRE.
Mental Impressions of the Soldiers When Bullets Fly About.
James Heart Brown in Washington's.
I was wandering on foot through a wood trying to see how the battle was going. There was a continuous firing to the left and the his of bullets over our heads. Abruptly the Confederates opened on us from an adjacent battery with grape and canister. The shot rattled all around us, cutting down the bare twigs and boughs above and plowing up the ground in our immediate vicinity. It was so abrupt and the source was so invisible that I was fairly started at first, but I was exhilarated also. It seemed like real war. The sensation was genuine and not unpleasant, because, perhaps, I saw nobody struck.

It makes a deal of difference with one's feelings, under fire, when one is the witness of casualties in the immediate neighborhood. The sense of danger is greatly increased as well as the likelihood of death, if one is falling around one—if somebody at one's side receives a ghastly or a mortal wound. Wounds and death in the concrete appear very different from what they do in abstract. Time and experience are needed before a soldier can be moved by the inevitable horrors of war. Usage makes us to a certain extent callous to our surroundings. It is not so much that we are hardened, but that we are not so much affected by the sight of death. A soldier in his first engagement is inclined to a presentiment of death, and is often surprised when it is over to find that he is still alive. In his twentieth or thirtieth year he is a different man. He has seen the death of his comrades, and he is cool in the presence of peril.

every day at noon bearing a large shin-bone of beef. His cry was, "Three struts and a wallop for a barbeque. All the housewives had their vegetable stewing for the family soup, and gladly paid their barbeque for the privilege of two struts with the bone, which was supposed to flavor the stew."

STORY OF GEN. SHERMAN.
A Singular Interview With Him at Jackson, Miss.
Henry Clay Fairman is the Sunny South. Yes, Joseph R. Johnston had crossed Pearl River on his retreat to the east, and it was known that Sherman would evacuate Jackson and pursue him as soon as possible. With great difficulty I had secured from the Federal authorities the assurance that my cotton factory would not be burned. But on the night when the evacuation was in progress I learned from reliable sources that a change had been made in the orders and that the torch was likely to be applied to the property at any moment. I resolved to seek an immediate interview with Gen. Sherman himself—entirely uninvited, however, but slender hopes—especially at such an untimely hour, for it was past midnight. I had little trouble in ascertaining the place, where, to my great surprise, I found no guards to check my progress. The house was quiet and unlighted, so far as I could discern. Somewhat puzzled I paused for a minute or two and said to myself: "Surely this is not the headquarters of a great United States Army."

TEXT OF THE ORDER.

Chief Arthur's Instructions From the Court to Keep Hands Off.

HE IS SERVED AND HAS GIVEN NOTICE, THROUGH ATTORNEYS, OF AN APPEAL.

The Substance of the Celebrated Ricks Opinion Condensed for the Record—The Garment-Workers' Strike in New York—Why the Decision of Court Was in Favor of the Men.

TOLEDO, O., April 6.—The order of the court in the Ann Arbor matter involving the engineers and Chief P. M. Arthur is in substance as follows:

It is ordered that a writ of injunction pending the hearing of the issues herein be issued out of and under the seal of this court directed to the defendant, Peter M. Arthur, enjoining and restraining him from issuing, promulgating or continuing in force any rule or order of any kind under the rules and regulations of the association known as the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, or otherwise, which shall require or command any employee of any of the defendant companies herein to refuse to receive, handle or deliver any cars of freight to or from the Ann Arbor road and also from in any way, directly or indirectly, endeavoring to persuade or induce any employee of railway companies whose lines connect with the Ann Arbor not to extend to said company the same facilities for insurance of interstate traffic as are extended by said companies to other railway companies.

Chief Arthur was served with a notice of the injunction to-day, his attorneys having given notice of appeal, the court has filed the bond in the sum of $200.

THE REASON OF THE DECISION.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The decision of Judge Barrett, of the supreme bench, dissolving the temporary injunction restraining the United Garment Workers from sending out the boycott circulars, exposing the Clothing Manufacturers' Association, and denying a motion to make the injunction permanent, was a great triumph for the men. The decision was based on the ground that the action could not be maintained by more than one individual plaintiff. There was no such thing as a combination of plaintiffs. In this case both sides were equally guilty and capable of taking care of themselves. A court of equity should keep its hands off. Lawyer Johnson, for the manufacturers' Association, declared that he would arrange to bring individual action against the defendants.

The locked out clothing cutters and garment workers are exultant to-day over the legal decision which they gained yesterday. The officers of the United Garment Workers remained up all night to address and mail about 4,000 of the circulars. The decision is a great victory for the men. The Clothing Manufacturers' Association sought to have them enjoined from circulating. General Secretary Leitch, of the garment workers said that the men who had been locked out by the manufacturers and sent to the streets to find work, were now free to work. He said that the decision was a great victory for the men. He said that the decision was a great victory for the men. He said that the decision was a great victory for the men.

STRIKERS SUE EMPLOYERS.

A CHINESE LEPER.

Horrible Revelations From Chinatown, San Francisco.

From the San Francisco Chronicle. Officers of the Chinatown police squad crawled down into a dark and dirty basement of No. 23 Bartlett alley yesterday afternoon and discovered a Chinese leper. When they entered the dark, foul-smelling hole their eyes were unable to penetrate the blackness until a candle had been produced and lighted. Then they groped their way back to the rear of the cellar, bumping their heads on the joists above, then down a pair of stairs into a darker and still fouler pit, where they found the leper.

He is an old man, probably 50 years of age, and for two years he is said to have been pained up in a windowless and almost airless room, the ground floor of the building. He returned with lanterns, however, and a horrible sight was exposed to their gaze. They found the leper all but helpless. His whole body was in an advanced stage of the terrible disease had eaten nearly all the flesh from one of his legs.

When the policemen left the place an officer was stationed there to guard the leper's person. Sergeant Quillan, of the Board of Health of the discovery, and Policeman McManis went to the headquarters of the Chinese Six Companies, where the Secretary in charge was made acquainted with the facts. The Six Companies positively refused to render any assistance, declaring that the matter was no concern of theirs, and the policeman was told to dispose of the leper by order of the Board of Health.

"RATTLESNAKE BILL" FEAT.

A Race That Included a Leap From a Precipice 700 Feet High.

From the Chicago Tribune. "I do not want at this late day to take away any of the glory Gen. Putnam acquired by his famous ride in Revolutionary days," said G. P. Chandler of Colorado. "But I was an eye-witness of a ride out in Colorado that was a whole lot more daring than that of the brave Putnam, and the rider was not inspired by patriotism. It was all done on a wager between two fellows of a reckless type, found only in the uncombed West."

"From Union dump to Pandora mill, near Telluride, Colo., in the great Marshall Basin, and not far from the beautiful Bridal Veil Falls, is a distance of some thing over two miles. The dump is 300 feet above the mill that there is a drop of 8,000 feet in the trail which leads down from it. The trail is a hard one, and to accomplish a journey from the dump to the mill was the work of an hour. The ore from the mine was carried to the mill on burros, thirty or forty of the little 'elevators' usually being led down at a time. A fellow who termed himself 'Rattlesnake Bill,' the terror of the miners, was one of the best packers around the camp. He was a great gladiator, but what he boasted of more than anything else he owned on earth was a cow pony by name 'Get There.' The trail from travel for men than for horses, but Bill always swore that he and 'Get There' could cover the distance faster than any man in the mountains. He offered to bet on the proposition, and finally found a skeptic in the person of one 'Lanky' Johnson, who owned a saloon and a pair of legs which were his pride. He was considered the finest mountaineer in the State. Well, 'Lanky' and Rattlesnake Bill's Feat.

Bill came to terms for a race. Bill wagering his summer wages, his burro, his cabin and fixtures, and everything else he could beg or borrow that he could ride his pony from the dump to Pandora in shorter time than Lanky could go the same distance afoot. He even robbed his own trunk and bet the clothes he wore on the proposition. "Get There" met him and put up coin against the collateral, the stake all told being worth $500. "The day for the trial came. The miners in the Basin all threw down their tools, business was suspended in Telluride and everybody turned out to see the sport. The packers turned their boxes, and even the Bridal Veil was lifted, they say out there, that the falls might see the sport. "It was a perfect day away up there in the mountains when Bill, mounted on 'Get There,' and 'Lanky' Johnson went to the post for the big trial. The miners but furiously at least $100 changing hands. 'Lanky' was a hot favorite. The miners knew the trail well. They knew, or believed, a man could move over it as fast as a horse and that he could take 'cut-off' a rider would not dare to attempt. But they knew nothing of the recklessness in Bill's heart as 'Get There' bounded away at a furious pace, guided by a blacksnake in the hands of one of Bill's friends. "Halfway down the travelling was good for the horse, but Lanky's horse was based on the 'cut-off' foot-wide trail that led down the side of a 700-foot precipice. The horse

He Will Bring You Out!

The Only M'Nichol.

Entered town not long ago,
A picture for an artist's brush—
My fortune had gone rather slow;

In fact, I was not very much,
And Julia fully thought to hear
How I at home had all prepared.
A neat flat taken by the year.
In truth my every dream she shared.

Ah, who can tell the grievous thoughts,
Of one who battles 'gainst his fate;
I might have told her, and I ought—

But then waited till too late!
At last I laid the whole case down,
I said we could not now be wed.
I had no prospects in the town
Except my wages. Hope had fled.

Ah, then she proved a woman's strength—
This maiden all unmaidenly plan.
She told me much and then at length

She told me of a wondrous man!
A man whose help extends to all—
To him with money, him without—
She showed me how I ought to call,
And that is how it came about.

I saw McNichol and grew glad.
He proved the aid that he could bring;
It was the only hope I had

For marriage in the early spring.
No matter now, we live in peace;
Each day is happier, so to speak;
I see my daily joys increase,
And pay for luxuries by the week.

And what a blessing it has been for us. We furnished our little home beautifully and for only a nail sum weekly, of
